INCONSISTENT LABOR LEADERS.

One of the amazing aspects of the Cleveland street railway situation is the position taken by the "leaders of the proletariat," or, in other words, falist movement in that city. If the Cleveland papers are correct Max Hayes, who was a candidate for governor on the Socialist ticket some years ago and came wihin an ace of being nominated for the vice presidency at the Socialist convention in Chicago a few weeks ago, and Robert Blandlow, also one of the best known Objects to Statements in Socialists in the United States, are condemning the present administration of street railway affairs. In one instance the condemnation is accompanied by a statement that the gentlemen in question had supported Mr. Johnson prior to the settlement of April 27, but were bitterly opposed to him now. It is not the desire of Socialism as a cure for the evils of mankind but to show the inconsistency, if possible, of these gentlemen above named who belong to a party which proposes to change the present class is exploited for the benefit of another, to a system under which all industry will be carried on for the benefit of all, just as Mr. Johnson has changed the street railway system in Cleveland from one conducted for the profit of the stockholders only, to of Missouri threatening to head up the pork barrel, unless the Vreeland bill is passed. That may fetch 'em. "Give un emergency," shouts Bartholdt, the missionary of peace, "or you shall not have a pound of pork from the barrel." This awful alternative staggers congressmen, and brings them to a sense of obligation that is due to themselves.

But isn't it strange, that a highminded legislator should say to a brother member, "unless you violate your sense of duty and vote for my bill, the one wou favor shall not pass? That is the situation, if we are to be fieve the dispatches from Washington, We say "if," because it is hard to believe that Barthodlt with his record for world peace, could bring himself to the adoption of so contemptible

TAKES PIECE OF LEG

Ripley, May 27-While Tom Baird, the young son of Oscar Baird, a wealthy farmer of the Eagle Highlands neighborhood, in Brown county, was fishing in Eagle Creek, he saw a big catfish about the size of a large dog. The water being only four feet deep, young Baird got out of the boat, after taking his shoes off, and essayed to catch the fish with a spear, driving it into a small inlet. The fish, however, rushed at the boy, grabbed him by the leg, and attempted to draw him under an overhanging ledge of rock. After a hard struggle the fish let go, not, however, before he had taken a big piece of flesh from the boy's leg. As the fish darted away it leaped almost out of the water near the boat and made a bite at it, cutting a piece about the size of a silver dollar from its side. Young Baird dragged himself to shore and called for help.

Recount of the Ballots

SHOWS M'CLELLAN LOSS

New York, May 27.-John T. Dolling, president of the board of elections, turned a key in the padlock on the ballot boxes from the second election district of the sixth assembly district at about noon today and the recount of the mayoralty vote of 1905, was on. From then till 4 o'clock the monotonous counting and checking of ballots went on, save for an hour's recess, and at the close of the day the contents of two ballot boxes had been recounted, and William R. Hearst had gained 27 votes, and had reduced McClellan's plurality by that Piguring on an average gain for Hearst of 27 votes in two boxes, the Hearst adherents had it tonight that instead of a plurality of 3474 for McClellan, the final result would be a plurality of 22,824 for Hearst. There are 1948 ballot boxes of that election ,and they contain some 600,000 votes in all. An average gain of two votes per box for Hearst would, as a matter of fact, be sufficient to upset the election returns and seat the independence municipal ownership leaguer, as mayor of the city.

Judging from today's results, and from the examination that was made in December of 1905 of four ballot boxes before McClellan's lawyers got busy and stopped the recount that was then in progress, it is quite possible that enough errors may crop up in the recount of the ballots to change the verdist as recorded by the board of county canvassers. The chief hopes of the Hearst people are really based, not on any probability of showing fraud, though that was developed today, but on the fact that the inspectors let through a good many ballots, the majority of them for McClellan, that will not pass muster in a court of law because of incorrect marking or other defects.

The fraud that was shown lay in O'Reilly admits that she is receiving a practical reversal, by election intrict of the eighth assembly district. The order adjudging Thaw insane, of the totals of the votes cast for mitted to the courts, right after the watcher that, against his violent profound a plurality for McClellan instead of a plurality for Hearst, as the count had showed. > The recount in court showed that Hearst had a plurality of eleven. Clarence J. Shearn and Charles A Dolsen, the two special deputies of Attorney General Jackson, who are trying the people's side of the case, were correspondingly elated by the results of the day. Shearn said after the adjournment of court that he was confident it would be necessary to open all the ballot boxes to prove that Hearst was really elected.
